A resolution for consideration by the member churches of the National Association of Congregational Christian Churches has been proposed by the Cadman Memorial Congregational Church, Brooklyn, NY. It will be considered during the New Business section of the Virtual Annual Meeting on June 27, 2020. Here is the text of the resolution:

RESOLUTION

Cadman Memorial Congregational Church requests that the NACCC acknowledge and address the current global issue of racism and social justice.

The Congregational Christian Churches have a history of social justice. Evidence of this has been exhibited by members and member churches who showed empathy, activism and the love of Christ by providing stops and provisions on “The Underground Railroad” during slavery.

As members of The National Association of Congregational Christian Churches, we request that next twelve issues of the ‘Congregationalist’ have an article on racism to awaken the consciousness of all member churches about the issue. Churches and regional associations can also submit articles denoting how they have been led to support the movement of social justice and equity in our society and culture.
