Course Descriptions

Course #1: Contextual Biblical Applications

Dates: September & October

Course Description: In today's world many question the relevance of Scripture for their lives; this is as true within the church as without. This course will help learners address congregants' concerns (e.g., finances, sickness, conflict, death) and societal issues (e.g., racial justice, culture, sexual identity, and immigration) through the application of Scripture. Participants will have the opportunity to engage in these topics in class through lectures, discussion, and student presentations.

Course Instructors: Rev. Joy Matos, and Rev. Dr. Michael F. Fales

Course Fee: $200

Course #2: Advanced Preaching and Teaching

Dates: November

Course Description: This course provides an overview of to the process of the paradoxical enterprise of preaching, explores methodologies of sermonic development and examines the issues concerning the vocational formation of practitioners. Participants will learn to listen to/read sermons discerningly and will prepare and preach messages of their own, receiving constructive feedback from their classmates and instructor. This praxis centered exercise will utilize a myriad of learning approaches to develop and enhance preaching abilities, including lectures, discussions, videos and recordings, and creative brainstorming/mind-mapping.

The practicality of this approach is augmented by a theological understanding which takes into account the various elements that the preacher should be aware of in the proclamation of the Gospel, including responsible handling of the biblical text; the concerns and vitality of the local Church; the potential impact of cultural values and presuppositions within varied audiences; and the preacher's own personality, style and world view.

Course Instructor: Rev. Peter Hart, First Congregational Church, Detroit, MI

Course #3: Advanced Pastoral Care and Pastoral Ethics

Dates: December

Course Description: This course builds upon the curriculum from the Essentials of Pastoral Care and Pastoral Ethics course, and it assumes students are versed in the fundamental skills needed for providing effective pastoral care, and in an ethical way. This course, then, will engage students to apply their learnings through contextual application. Students will have opportunities to reflect critically upon pastoral care visits and will consider their competencies, formational needs, and theological orientation through this process. Students will share their reflections in the group setting to facilitate feedback, shared learning, and peer-to-peer support.

Course Instructor: Tesha Kathryn Urban, Associate Minister, First Congregational Church, Wauwatosa, WI

Course Fee: $100
