

REPORT ON THE REPAIRS OF 6 CLASSROOMS AND AN OFFICE
AT THE MISSION SCHOOL OF HOPE: MOLOBO CAMPUS

Duration of Project: July 9 to September 3 , 2025

Report Presented by Beatrice Ntube Diffang

Restoring Dignity & Building Self-Esteem At The Molobo Campus

The classrooms at the Molobo campus were built about 23 years ago and they had become old and severely dilapidated. Poor infrastructure doesn't just affect learning; it deeply shapes how children see themselves and their place in society. The children at Molobo had developed a strong feeling of inferiority complex with regards to their friends at the OWENS Family campus which so far has been rated the best in the district with regards to clean, beautiful facilities and a wonderful learning environment, no wonder the best pupil in the national entrance exam into the middle school came from OWENS.

The dilapidated state of the school did not just lead to the development of a low self-esteem in the lives of the children but led to the feeling of embarrassment and neglect. The constant reminder of broken walls, damaged floors, broken doors, and leaking roofs can make them feel their future is also "broken." Most often children who feel neglected by their school environment may grow up with a mindset that they cannot change their circumstances, reducing initiative and leadership qualities. In short: A broken classroom environment builds broken self-esteem. Children start believing they are unworthy, invisible, and incapable of rising above their conditions—unless deliberate interventions are made.

The repair of the Molobo campus has transformed more than just buildings—it has renewed hope, dignity, and confidence for our children and teachers. This has restored their self-esteem, improved concentration and learning and has renewed their hope for the future. A dignified environment reminds them that they are valued, capable, and worthy of the best. They now dream bigger, knowing they have a safe place to nurture those dreams.

The repaired building have boosted the morale of the teachers, we see greater commitment among them and renewed respect. The improved environment has also raised the teachers' sense of professional dignity, making them proud to serve in a school that reflects excellence.

The team worked hard to make sure all was set before the reopening of the school in September although the weather was not so favourable as the repairs were made in the heart of the rainy season.

Thank You

We want to use this opportunity to thank you, this transformation would not have been possible without your generosity and compassion. You have not only repaired walls, floors and roofs, you have rebuilt self-esteem, restored dignity, and reignited hope in every child and teacher at Molobo. Every smile, every word of gratitude, and every step of progress in our classrooms carries your fingerprint. On behalf of the Mission School of Hope family, we say thank you for believing in us, for standing with us, and for helping us turn broken walls into bridges of hope. Together, we are shaping futures. Together, we are proving that hope is alive at Molobo.

Their smiles say it all

District Officer of Mbang visited the school and this what he said: “The transformation of the Molobo campus is remarkable. A strong learning environment is essential for quality education, and what has been done here sets a powerful example for other schools. On behalf of the District, I extend our gratitude to those who donated. The support given to Mission School of Hope is a gift not only to the children but to the entire district.”

“Our school is very beautiful ! Thank you for helping us.” Said Maeva 5th grade

“The repaired campus has lifted our spirits as teachers. We feel respected, valued, and motivated to pour more into our students’ lives. Thank you to all the donors for standing with us and for not abandoning us even though Rev. Charles Sagay is dead.” Said Mr. Aleokakol , the headteacher of Molobo

We can never thank you enough for this wonderful act of love and generosity. We pray that the Lord Almighty will keep you in perfect health and bless all you do.